It Was Not So.

The parties interested in the care of the aced tady suffering from paralysis, mentioned a day or so ago, came to THE GAZETTE Office last night and furnished proof that the assertions made therein were unfounded, and that somebody had evidently "worked a rabbit's foot" on the reporter. It is not the intention of THE GAZETTE to misrepresent anyone, though such mistakes

After Suspicious Characters.

Chief Maddox and his men are making suspicious characters "hard to catch." It was known among the force that a number of the light-lingured gentry were in the city, but it would have been hard to make a city, but it would have been hard to make a case against them, but seeing they were gentlemen of leisure the order was given that they must make themselves scarce, and the order is being carried out. The ap-proaching circus and Dullas fair dates are no doubt attracting these people to this section of the state.

St. Paul's New Quarters.

St. Paul's church will hold its Sabbath school at 9:45 a. m. in the chapel of the new shurch, corner Seventh and Lamar. Preach-ing at it a, in, will be in Fort Worth uni-versity chapel. Next Sabbath week all the services will be held in the new church. There may be some delay in securing the rathedral glass windows, but the rooms will be made comfortable. The public will no doubt be pleased to know that this congregation is getting into better quarters.

Citizens living along the line of the old Rosedale ratiway track on Jennings avenue are complaining loud of the blockade made by the workman in putting down the double track. An entire block, and sometimes more is blockaded, from sidewalk to sidewalk, forcing travelers to go around, much to their inconvenience, when a portion of the width of the street could be left open, it is asserted, sufficient to admit of the pass-ing of a vehicle, as is done on Main and Houston streets when similar work is under

The four reformatory candidates will this morning be taken to Gatesville. They were to have been taken several days ago, but the agent failed to come for them. A Relic of Bygone Days.

Adeline Harris, an aged colored woman, that last Thursday night at the house of the deceased came to Fort Worth from Marsball, Tex., where she was well known to "Dutch." and had been flying here sleven years. "Dutch" was an old-fashmed Southern negress who preserved the last all the idiosyncrasics of her race i slavery days. She was a good cook and statery days. She was a good cook and a valuable servant until the increasing in-fernities of old age clouded her mind and put a period to her usefulness. The closing days of her life were made as comfortable as possible and she was respectfully in-ternal centering in the convent cemetery.

The Waro Execusion.

All indications and facts point to a grand time for those who take in the Railway cub's excursion to Waco to morrow. The committee has been informed of numerous committee has seen informed of numerous families that are arranging to go, and it is sufe to predict that two, if not three, sections will be run to accommodate the people. There will be a stay of at least six hours in the city of Ware, and it is understood extensive preparations are making to entertain the visitors. Aside from the ride through a magnitude. noise. Aside from the fide through a mag-nificent section of country, music and mirth will be the features of the day. The Democratic Club.

The meeting of Democrats at the court-house last night for perfecting the organization of the club was well attended. After some remarks by the Hons, Sam Canty, Temple Houston and A. M. Carter, the report of the committee on organization, constitution and by-laws was called for. Wilson Gregg, Esq., represented the committee, and stated the plan of organization as contemplated. The regulations were founded upon those of the Iroquois club of Chicago, which has been in successful operation for several years. As a permanent and thorough operativation was proposed differing from organization was proposed, differing from the temporary clubs customary heretofore, considerable discussion was provoked re-garding the best methods to be pursued; and as the debate on various points made the adoption of the whole report liable to be delayed until a too late an hour, only about half of the constitution and by-laws were passed upon, and the consideration was postponed. At the meeting on next Friday hight further action on the report will be the special order, and will excite much in-

Given Five Years.

Mrs. Maggie Magee was on trial yester-day in Judge Beckham's court, the style of the case being the state of Texas vs. Mrs. Maggie Magee, charged with the theft of a horse and buggy from J. P. Woods in this city some months since, the facts concern-ing which are well known to TRE GAZETTE readers. The trial occupied the entire day, the case going to the jury late in the after-noon, and in a short time they returned a verdlet finding her guilty and assessing her punishment at five years in the penitontiary. Mrs. Magee appeared at ease dur-ing the entire proceedings, though paying strict attention to every move made by witness or attorney, and during the argument of the case never for a moment let her gaze rest anywhere but upon the speaker. Her little daughter, a bright-eyed little girl of about thirteen years, sat by her side and did not seem to realize the graveness of the charge against her mother. This girl was with her mother during the time she had the horse and buggy in possession, and they were in many tawns and cities were in many towns and in the state during that e state during that period, was several weeks, and was her mother during her stay Mrs. Magee's defense was that she bought the turnout from an employe of the bought the turnout from an employe of the livery stable, and attempt to prove periodical insanity. Physicians were called and mad much difficulty in bringing her around. It is said to have been the severest one she ever experienced, being subject to these attacks.

The Theater.

THE CLEMENCRAU CASE.

This play, found on Dumas' novel, will be presented Thursday evening. Those who have not read Dumas' novel of the same name may be told that the incidents same name may be told that the inchests of the play grows out of the exploits of a banished Russian countess. There is one seene in the play which has been much talked of, which is where Iza poses as a model for a statue which her husband is making. This scene has been much criticisal owing to the weightle manuar in cised, owing to the realistic manner in which it was presented at first. Modifica-tions have been made without any loss of dramatic interest. The company is composed of well-known players.

Enwin Arben.—Of the young actors of our day, Mr. Arden may be truthfully accorded the first place among the represent-atives of the heroic school of the drama of which, in their time, Wallack and Fechter were the great leaders. Arden first saw the footlights in the company of Thomas W. Keene, and afterwards supported Edwin After two years spent in the stock companies of Madison square and the Bos-ton theater, the ambitious young fellow (he is not yet twenty-seven) wrote Eagle's Nest in conjunction with his father, a St. Louis journalist, and took the road under his own management. He then wrote two other plays, including "Raglan's Way," and so has gone on winning golden opinic everywhere. His present play, "Night: Morning," is a companion picture to "Raglan's Way," is supported by a good com-pany, and illustrated by special scenery.

Tarrant County Cotton.

Correspondence of the Gazette. Azle, Tex., Oct. 9.—Your correspondent was at the gin yesterday evening, and finding between fifty and seventy-five bales of cotton not ginned waiting their turn, I de-termined to take a stroll over the country to see the productive soil that surrounds Azle and behold the king of fleeces that decorates every farm and the smiles of progress that wrinkle every farmer's face in this part of Tarrant county.

Mr. John Walker, who lives two miles east of here, has about 100 acres in cotton on his farm, and he says that he will get but sixty or seventy-five bales. Rev. Mr. Rowland, a big planter, says he will make one-half bale to the acre. Mr.

Hoket, on Maj. Jarvis' farm, and a big planter, says that he will make one-half bale to the acre. Mr. J. F. M. Standfield, a large and successful planter, says that he will make something near three-fourth of a hale to the acre. I saw several acres that will make a bale to the acre, and some few that will make from one and one-fourth to one and one-half bales to the acre. Most of the above is in what is called the valley farms, but upland or sandy farms, as Messrs, Sessions, Tanner, Dent, Enos, etc., will all make at least one-half bale to

On several farms the leaf worms have eaten all the leaves and shucks from around the bolls off of the cotton and hence it is opening very rapidly. The cold nights during the past week seem to have had no effect on it. Everybody is wanting pickers.
The school has been deferred for two weeks that the children might assist in gathering.

up there were two very large lodges near here, but since the Alliance got into politics everything that had Alliance on it was put in a box and locked up and the key thrown away. That box is resting, like most of the Alliance politicians, in the dust under a school house.

I asked many of the planters what they thought would raise the price of cotton. Most of them answered: "Supply and demand rules the price of everything that we have for sale, so we will just have to raise less cotton and more of everything else, but never raise more than the demand.

Most of the farmers here say that as long as the Alliance was going on they made balloon crops—theoretical crops—and sold them the same way, at night; but as soon as they threw the lock on the thing and put it out of sight and went to work them selves, they began to prosper.

THE THIRD ANNUAL EXHIBIT CLOSED A GALA DAY.

Governor Hogg Delivers a Wholesome Address on Political and Agricultural Reform-Given the Blue Ribbon.

orrespondence of the Gazette. McGregor, McLennan Coons, Tex. Oct. 8—To-day brought to a close the great-est event in the history of the Texas Grange, the third annual exhibit. No great enterprise was ever managed with less wrangle and friction. The president of this association and his associates certainly deserve great credit for their untiring en ergy in making the occasion so pleasant and at the same time such a grand success. It seems almost phenomenal that so many premiums could have been awarded without a complaint from any source.

More than fifty races, many of them clos and intensely exciting, have been passed upon during the fair, and not a dissenting voice has been raised against the final decisions of the judges, a record few associations have made and one this organization should be proud of. When it is understood that nearly $15,000 have been awarded in premiums and about the same amount. premiums and about the same amount hanged hands on the race tracks without a misunderstanding, it is worthy of special mention, To-day the weather has been delightful and the crowd immense, variously esti-mated at from five to seven thousand. Governor Hogg is the chief attraction. The notice of his arrival last evening spread like wildfire. The governor's best friends in this section and his worst enemies and the indifferent, were here to-day to en-courage and to abuse him.

Long before the hour for the speaking to begin every available space on the pavilion floor, banisters and stairways was occupied. At 11 o'clock President Ray arose to introduce the governor, who stepped to the front of the platform amidst deafening ap-plause. The friends of the governor wore groad smiles, and looked as though they were where St. Paul heard things he could not afford to repeat before a mob. The governor spoke for an hour, and confined his remarks to political and agricultural re-

He said no political reform was ever ected by abusing those with whom we differ. He said the man who spent his Satur-day afternoons down town chewing tobacco and spitting at fly-specks and cursing the country was never much better through abuse. He advised the Grangers to deal squarely with their tenants and encourage hem to secure homes, that the ownership of land made patriots. In referring to the burden of taxation he showed very plainly that it was not all levied or collected by the state. He cautioned the young men about loafing around saloons. He asked the Granger who takes his morning drink, if he ever thought that the cost of ten drinks would pay a year's state tax on $1000 wort of property, that one drink would pay his school tax for one year on $100 dollars worth of property. He advised them to uit some of their worse than useless in-iulgences that were oppressing labor more than was public taxation, and they would find less reason for cursing the country and he government in general. The governor's speech contained some wholesome advice and was well received. It was an honest, invarnished, plain statement of facts with no effort at all at oratory or eloquence. The governor brought a basket of vegetables with him from Austin. He said he thought was the duty of every Granger who came to the fair to bring an exhibit.

At the close of the governor's speech M. s. C. O'Bryan, wife of the editor of the W. C. O'Bryan, wife of the editor of the McGregor Observer, stepped upon the plat-form and pinned the blue ribbon on the covernor's exhibit amidst tremendous ap-
